Basically, sugar and water are systematized and transformed into hydrogen. And hydrogen is pumped at a reactor and it produces energy. Scientists want to develop it because they believe that In the future it will have helped to face climate change. It is important to remember that by 2030 If we continue exploiting the unrenewable sources of energy, that pollute the environment, we will have destroyed a big percentage of ozon layer.